German Forestry: Who is who?

Due to Germany's federal structure, there are independently organized forestry administrations, enterprises and associations in the 16 states as well as several nationwide umbrella organizations. They are all members of the German Forestry Council. The German Forestry Council (Deutscher Forstwirtschaftsrat, DFWR) is the political voice for forestry in Germany. It speaks on behalf of approximately 2 million private and public forest owners, the forestry's scientific and professional organizations as well as other forest-related organizations.
